New Furnace Being Built at Glass Factory

Will Be Equipped With All Modern Improvements

The Glass Factory here has been a very busy place for the past week. Workmen have been busy tearing down no. 1 furnace which will be replaced by a slightly larger furnace just as soon as possible. The new furnace will be equipped with all modern improvements and conveniences and when completed will be right up to date in every particular. It is expected to be completed and in operation within a month.

In the mean time the plant is carrying on as usual with three machines operating from the other furnaces and turning out all kinds of glass ware now in demand.

Twenty-five reservations have been made in Mid City Hall for the "Vimy Pilgrimage" to the scene of Vimy Ridge next July. It is expected a few will go from Redcliff.

The house of commons will adjourn for the Easter recess Wednesday, April 8, and resume Monday, April 20. A notice of motion in the name of Premier Mackenzie King providing for the adjournment appeared on today's order paper.

The department of Agriculture at Edmonton has just issued a bulletin containing valuable information and instructions for the raising and caring of poultry. This bulletin may be obtained free of charge on application to the Poultry Commissioner G. M. Cronie, Edmonton.

Alberta's new master code of business will not come into effect April 1 as previously for cast, but will be specially arranged a few days later and will be in force probably before the middle of this month, it was announced by Hon. E. C. Manning, Minister of Trade and Industry.

The registration of Alberta citizens who would be eligible for Social Credit basic dividends has been postponed indefinitely. Premier Albertart said in explaining the lack of action since the plan was announced last autumn. Another 11 or 12 months will be time enough for that, he said.

Pre-Festival Concert On Friday the 24th

Will Probably Be Held in Little Theatre

The school pre-festival concert will be held on Friday, April 24th. It is expected this will be held in the Little Theatre. Particulars will be given later. In the mean time keep this date in mind and we would expect that an effort be made to get all out to conflict with the state or with the practices of the school festival.

Both teachers and pupils are taking a keen interest in the concert and promises to make for the Redcliff School to make its usual good showing at this year's festival.

Local Band Made Splendid Showing

By an oversight, largely through our machine trouble last week, the report of the local band concert last Sunday was left out. Bad weather and a sickness kept a number away but there was a fairly good attendance and all thoroughly enjoyed the program. Many were most agreeably surprised at the wonderful improvement the band has made since its last public appearance. It was proud of the organization and are anxious to hear it again.

The Ken MacGy Mysterios variety show put on an entertainment in Cliff Hall last Monday evening. Owing to the lack of a permit there was a very poor attendance.

Transients coming to Alberta from other provinces will not be granted provincial relief, and such men must be returned to their own province if they need assistance because of unemployment. It was made known Saturday by A. A. McKenzie, chairman of the Alberta relief commission.

The Glasgow Rangers blasted their way into the finals for the Scottish football cup last Saturday by defeating Clyde 3-0 before 50,000 spectators on the spacious enclosure of the Queen's Park Club. Rangers now meet Third Lanark in the final. The game will be played on April 18 for the coveted trophy.

Default The Payment Of Alberta Bonds

First Province In Canada To Be In Default

Alberta failed yesterday to redeem two bond issues totaling $3,200,000, and so became the first Province in Canada's history to default on bond maturity. The bonds were to have been redeemable in Edmonton, Calgary and Montreal. There was a little reaction to the province's failure. Premier Albertart announced simply, "We haven't the money. I'm sorry but we must default."

After two weeks of nice Springlike weather a sturdy blizzard blew up last Saturday right bringing with it a drop in the temperature. Considerable snow fell but it blew up in drifts in all directions. By Monday however, it was over and bright milder weather returned.

The King to Attend The Maundy Service

Second Time in 200 Years The King Has Attended

For only the second time in 200 years the reigning sovereign of Great Britain will attend personally the Maundy service in Westminster Abbey on Maundy Thursday, April 9.

King Edward announced the intention of himself distributing the gifts of "Maundy" to as many "deserving" old men and women as the King's years old.

In this case His Majesty's birthday will be anticipated. The King will be 42 on June 27 and this number of recipients will receive the specially-minted silver Maundy money, much sought by coin collectors.

School Carnival Was Big Success Here Last Friday

Cover $900.00 For Purchasing Gym Equipment

There was fun galore at the carnival put on last Friday evening by the high school pupils.

On entering the building one was greeted with pandemonium in which the announcers for the different booths were advertising their attractions and goods in a manner that reminded one of the midway on a circus grounds. The cries were drawing crowds to the several booths to see the several shows in which were the wild man from Borneo, the tallest man on earth, the midge, the fat lady, the human monkey, the armless wonder, the two faced man, the moving pictures, and the fortune teller. Besides these were the hot dog booths, the drawing of prizes, a guessing on the beam jar, and the winners of your weight.

Although the side shows are all fakes — and everybody expected they would be — they were well gotten up and furnished considerable amusement, and, besides, all who saw them were boasting to meet their friends in also.

The carnival throughout was well put on and well managed. The main idea of it was to raise funds to purchase equipment for the school gymnasium, and those who patronized it will be glad to know that the pupils raised $900.00 for this purpose.

The kitchen stove "experts" were right. Even the weather in February was the coldest on record in Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the records began in 1883. But meteorological statistics date back to 1875 in Manitoba and last month in that province has to take second place to February of that year when it was "slightly colder."

What About State Medicine?

Taking all circumstances into consideration it might be wise, if the adventure is to be made, to try it out on an experimental basis, either by applying a complete scheme to a group of municipalities or district with the provincial government guaranteeing a deficit or by applying a partial service to an entire province. A test on some such basis would yield practical information as to when and how far further extensions could safely be made.

Outlook Is Better

Not So Much Danger Of Grasshopper Pest To Alberta
In a recent address at Calgary in 1935, H. B. Semmens, in charge of the Dominion Department of Agriculture at Lethbridge, said that the grasshopper outlook in Alberta was more optimistic than it had been since 1933. At the present time there were three areas of very severe infestation, the total considerably smaller than in 1933. The largest of these extended from Three Hills to Marmora; the second centered on Youngstown, and the third on Coaley. Also, there were several areas of severe infestation, one extending from Marmora to Nohelwood, one from Camarog to Champion, and one centering on Nanton. Further north, there were several smaller areas where control measures will probably be necessary, extending from Trochu, Beiseker, and Standen, east and north to the Saskatchewan boundary from Alaska to Killarney Lake. The rest of the area which was infested during the last two years was expected to have only very local outbreaks which might require control measures if the season were dry.

The parents visited the children's hospital every day now and Mrs. Dinna helped with the babies' baths and played with them. He hoped they would take a greater part in the children's care in the future.

A certain farm manager on one of the royal farms bought a bull at a very high price. It swept the board at all agricultural shows. Finally it was sold at an even higher price.
The king said nothing until the animal had gone. Then, one Sunday afternoon, on his way around the farms, he enquired if they had not bought some rather expensive cattle recently.
The farm manager agreed, but he added, the bull had won many prizes and had been sold at a good profit.
"Understand that the king replied, 'I farm as an ordinary farmer and exhibit my beasts in competition with other farmers. They can't pay high prices and neither will I. As for winning prizes by paying large sums for beasts, any Householder can do that. I won't.'"

Great Britain has started a very ambitious campaign to strengthen her defense—army, navy and air force, and it is estimated that $250,000,000 will be spent within the next three years on armaments. Where Old Customs Rule

Nothing More About Weddings In France's Basque Country
Ancient marriage customs persist in the Basque country, though in most other respects the Basques have gone as modern as Parisians. The Basque maid may wear Paris hats over her permanent wave, but when she gets married she follows the rites of her grandmother's day. One way they have of peeping into the future is to take a glass of water into the kitchen. The girl who does this will catch a vision of her future husband. She can accomplish the same purpose by breaking eggs on another person's head, if she knows anybody willing enough to collaborate.
Weddings, gifts, in Basque land, are most interesting. On the wedding morning the church's front yard, if the couple are poor, resembles a market place. Chairs, tables, cupboards, beds, crockery and cooking utensils are piled high. Among the bride's gifts is a "herald," a wooden pitcher made of staves and bound with brass bands, often elaborately chiseled. In this receptacle all her life she will fetch water from the spring. The groom invariably receives one of these "mashins" walking sticks of solid wood, heavily lugged with brass. This stick is the husband's badge of authority.
A Basque house widow received that the bride and groom should be of equal age, fortune and social rank.

Immense wedding cakes are the outstanding feature of the Basque wedding procession. The number and size of the cakes are an indication of the popularity of the couple. The cakes are carried shoulder high on tall trestles, and sometimes there are a dozen or more. Only one, however, is a real cake—usually the smallest and least ornate of the lot. The others are made of cardboard, and other materials, in imitation of the real cakes of previous centuries. They are priced as heirlooms, and brought out to grace the wedding of succeeding generations.

Infra-Red Rays Guide Owls

Living Things Give Off Body Heat Which Is Visible
Infra-red light rays guide owls to their prey at night, according to Dr. J. M. Cowan, assistant biologist at the provincial museum at Victoria, B.C. All living things give off heat, and the infra-red rays that he was best visible to the owl, he said. However, many of these birds combined all their hunting to the daytime.
He also noted how the four groups of owls—the short-winged hawk, hawk, broad-winged rodent hawk, long-winged falcon and fish hawk—were adapted to their mode of life. The bird hawk, which preyed on small birds among trees and shrubs, were built for maneuverability, with short wings and long tails. The broad-winged hawk were suited for long soaring and fast diving on small rodents in the open. The long-winged falcon, a class to which the hunting birds of olden times belonged, were designed for speed. They were capable of speeds up to 100 miles an hour. They hunted on the wing, killing their prey with a stunning blow of their closed beak, not their claws, and catching it as it dropped. They sometimes even killed their victims as they flew.
The fish hawk had sharp spurs on their feet for holding slippery fish.
The bald eagles victimized the fish hawk, grabbing their food from them in midair. The eagles also had a system of co-operation in attacking diving birds. Hunting in pairs, they would wait until the bird had dived under water, and then take it in turns to force it back each time it came to the surface, until the victim died of suffocation.

Profitable Oil Cans

Petrol-Tins Needed To Carry War To The Ethiopian Army
The American oil-can and British petrol-tin, symbols of white man's civilization in the deserts of the East, are being smuggled into Ethiopia today to serve as war material for the troops of Haile Selassie.
Painted and used as flower pots, punched full of holes and transformed into shower-baths by the natives of French and British Somaliland, these discarded receptacles suddenly have become of military importance. They are worth more today as canteens than the hundred and one things they can be made into by the blacks of the African east.
Pointed out the demand, the natives have embarked on a profitable oil-can business. Camel caravans and strings of mules are being utilized to transport this strange merchandise over ancient salt routes into Ethiopia. One empty tin sells for as high as one shilling.
Thousands of five-gallon tins, carried on the shoulders of the women of the deserts of the empty land of Ethiopia, are as good as aqueducts or water pipelines.
The British Somaliland people have been the victims of the empty tin. All the flowers of Djibouti's Place Menelik sprout from oil and gasoline cans that have been painted blue, green and yellow.
In the native villages the cooking is done over a charcoal stove made from a petrol tin. Altered the native stove which all the Gulf of Aden, they are utilized as life preservers, while the harbor they are painted red and made into buoys.

International Understanding

Free Interchange Of News Between Canada And U.S. A Point For Free interchange of news between Canada and the United States stands out among the "other relations" that must be linked with successful trade expansion, Major James G. Parmelee, deputy minister of trade and commerce for Canada, told the World Trade Committee at Detroit.
Sponsors of the new trade agreement between the two nations, the times held it would lead to mutually advantageous trade expansion and stronger ties of friendship, but trade expansion can be successfully accomplished only through these other relations.
Elucidation of news between the adjoining countries, said the deputy minister, "goes far toward the fostering of better understanding."
"While Canadian newspapers secure much news matter by direct cable from various parts of the world," he continued, "they rely very largely upon a co-operative arrangement between the Canadian Press and the Associated Press for information on world dangers and activities."

Major Parmelee quoted from an address of J. P. H. Lewis, general manager of the Canadian Press, in which the relations between the two organizations were explained, and the point made that trained Canadian newspapermen handle and edit the news output of the Associated Press.

"It is of course natural that in connection with this interchange the Canadian Press editors will usually have regard for the British connection and Canadian national spirit," said Major Parmelee. "Supplementary or complementary cable services are utilized in maintaining the balance in their favor."
"I am of the opinion that propaganda and half-truths are less prevalent in the news disseminated on this continent than in certain other and older parts of the world."

Radio likewise played its part in creating better understanding between the two nations, said the deputy minister, mentioning particularly addresses of the president and King Edwards' "simple message of goodwill."

When Brain Is Tired

Human Mind Drops Toward Animal Level Psychologist Finds
After 16,000 experiments in which college students on federal night payrolls were stimulated by pretexts, hints and imaginary steak, a Canadian University psychologist concluded that human minds drop toward the animal level when tired or under emotional strain.
Alexander said.
The experiments, said the psychologist, showed that human thinking was unpredictable and that it falls into three levels—animal, child and adult.
His subjects were 27 students of Beth Lou Junior College employed by the national youth administration. Saliva secretion was measured as the students were offered foods and treated to metronome and buzzer sounds.
"The nearest thing to automatic control . . . occurs during fatigue and strong emotional stress, when a person neither thinks nor reasons . . . approaching the animal level of mind," Dr. Haazen said.
Day-dreaming brings an adult temporarily back to a child's way of thinking, he said.

A Real Scotsman

King Edward said He Was One And Proud It
When the King left Glasgow for London on the regular night train after his visit to inspect the liner Queen Mary, Lord Provost John Stewart, chuckling, said, "he's a very human man—no human that in the afternoon, at tea, in my private room, he showed me how to balance a penny."

"I tried to emulate him, and when I had failed he said, 'please give me back my penny. You know I am a Scotsman.'"
Shattering another tradition of the royal family King Edward refused a special royal train for the journey and had a special car pulled on a regular train. His father, King George V, always traveled by special train.

Chinaware Lengthened Life Of Humanity

Wooden Treasures Used In Primitive Days Collected Gerns

How the manufacture of chinaware in England in the time of Queen Elizabeth increased the span of life of the people, was revealed in an interesting address in Toronto by Prof. C. G. Curran, of the Royal Ontario Museum.

In the primitive days there were two kinds of people: those who sat on the floor to eat and those who used tables. The former ate out of a hollow gourd, used to hold ale, while the latter ate out of the old wooden trenchers and they died off at an early age. Over a period of years the trencher collected as great a variety of germs as could be found in any laboratory. The people were poisoned to death and died very rapidly.

At the time of Queen Elizabeth average age of death was eight years, the speaker declared. The English population remained stationary for more than 1,000 years until the invention of plates. In the first 50 years after plates were used in England, the population doubled owing to the fact that the plates are perhaps one of the greatest gifts ever given to China. Prof. Curran declared.

The speaker pointed out that silk was a great boon to the women of Italy in the making of clothing which kept the flies and silver off the body to penetrate the skin. For 1,400 years men rode horses without stirrups, and the flies on the horse's border of China, invented them. The coming of the northern chieftain into Europe found the English flies and silver off the body. "Nobody knows when gunpowder was invented, but the Chinese had it many centuries ago," he said. "The oldest form of printing we have was invented by the Japanese."

Popular Weather Lore

Opinion Of Meteorologist Is That It Has No Value
That bit of lore about March stealing in like a lamb and roaring out like a lion, Meteorologist William H. Alexander of Columbus, Ohio, said, is in the same category with a dozen or more popular weather signs.

"But you can't make a lot of people believe those stories," he said. "They are absolutely worthless in determining what the weather will be a week, a month, or a year hence."

Among the other beliefs Alexander declared were false were: "The weather will be as good as determined by the stars and even in-famous weather changes."

"That weather for a season is determined by the kind of weather that has prevailed on any certain calendar day."

"That the character of a coming season can be determined by the behavior of animals, the thickness of fur grown by animals, or the thickness of bark on trees. That any one has yet found a sure method of forecasting the weather a year ahead, or of producing real artificiality."

Science Graduates Lucky

Electrical Engineers Have Least Difficulty in Securing jobs

Prospects are good that all 176 members of the graduates class at the University of Toronto will find positions this spring. Dr. G. C. Mitchell, dean of the faculty, said: "Employment was found for last year's class of 160 with little difficulty. Electrical engineers are most in demand, followed by mechanical, mining and metallurgical engineers, with chemical engineers last."

Thick eyebrows may be made thin, but it takes a lot of luck.

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMEN

FLEMING'S FOLLY

—BY LAWRENCE A. KEATINGE—

SYNOPSIS

The story opens with Link Fleming attending a meeting of Boom County cattlemen, called together with the object of forming an irrigation company.

Roger Kilgus, the boss of the Hamlets and nearby ranges, who seemed to approve the plan, was opposed to it, had forced Stock Tork Kilgus would be called upon to give his expert opinion in favor of the scheme, to reverse his earlier endorsement, and declare that irrigation in Boom county was for an Fleming's plan was concerned was only a new-fangled way to waste money.

The meeting terminated, but Buzz Hamilton and his sister, Helen, Link and Kilgus stay behind and Helen asks Fleming questions about his irrigation plan. This angers Buzz, who accuses Fleming of trying to influence her mind, as he asserts, ruin his "spread". Buzz shoots at Fleming, but an unaccountable lot of anger, but Buster Townsend, Link's foreman, it shot at the speaker, and Fleming is unhurt. Buzz is arrested and sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Helen and Fleming form a partnership to provide irrigation for their own properties. Fleming goes home and studies the plans drawn by Torney to learn whether they can be adapted to a smaller scheme suitable for his and Helen's place, and is satisfied to do so. Feeling cold, he lights the fire and there is an explosion that melts the house, burns it and the plans and renders Link unconscious. He is rescued from the blaze by an employee.

Helen and Link ride to Ryeleigh for supplies and to obtain funds for the dam project. They meet Hesper, who greets Helen and offers to sleep with her. Link goes to see the sheriff, who tells him that Buzz Hamilton has been paroled, and would appear on the incoming stage, but that he thinks Link has made a mistake in getting Buzz released.

(Now Go On With The Story)

"No, you bet not. Me and Marty Buzz swore off a couple of years ago."

Slowly she wheeled her pistol. "I thought perhaps you meant to try to win money to help us out. Because we are still in danger of being unable to finish the dam, aren't we?" Link avoided her look as he shrugged his shoulders. "None. But playin' to win means you're sure to lose. Go, Helen. You stay here. It's a treat that'll sure tickle you. Nope, can't tell you now. Wait an hour or two."

He stood in the thick dust watching her ride away. Then with a look of fondness, the source of which was considerably deeper than casual friendship, he started for the spot where Sheriff Shier stood waiting. There came the stage white yuh were in the bank," the official noted. "I tried to stall but Jackpot told me Kilgus came along, so made a run over Buzz an' insisted he have a drink with 'em. The bull gang is in the Half Moon now."

Harvested Fleming's dad, forhead as he surveyed the two-fare front of the saloon. "There's a lot of excitement irritable," those husbands don't care what they do in a youngster. Of course, Buzz is only two years' younger than me's twenty-one. But he seems like a kid, sheriff, that's got to be watched all the time. That'll be a fine start for a chap just paroled from prison."

"Helen's don't know her's here?" Link shook his head. "I met her on home. Now," he said reluctantly, starting away, "I've got to separate Buzz from them cattlemen and get him out to the Triple H. Amen, it might be better if you didn't come, on account of Buzz prob'ly saw all the lawyers at prison he came to see for quite a spell."

"I'll bet in none on long's he don't go have another 'round' with that. Tell Buzz I said so." And the link offer moved off.

Through a friend at the state capital Link had managed to have Buzz paroled after serving six months of the three-year sentence. Fleming had gone to the trouble merely to please Helen, for with a sister's fondness, for an earnest brother, she was unusually attached to Buzz. So much so, in fact, that she never thought of him as a criminal and a weakling, but as a youth who had been unfortunate in his choice of companions. It was Helen's ambition, Link knew, to see Buzz make a man of himself so that she could one day yield him the Triple H to manage again, or divide their property and surrender his share.

Moodily reviewing these facts, he rode inside the Half Moon. As the rebounding doors flung open, Link saw several ladies glanced up with interest. Recognizing him, they exchanged impatient looks and their eyes strayed to a large wall table where five men sat playing cards.

With something of a shock he identified the ex-convict for whose actions he was now responsible. Gray-pollard, who had dissipated his former healthy tan and Buzz Hamilton's thin face was lined beyond his years. A furtive, hanging expression persisted on his features and he had lost weight until he was almost scrawny. Loose, ill-made prison clothes hung in tatters about his sparsely fleshed body. The newcomer's worse appearance was little new than shocking.

Fleming's eyes caught those of the ex-convict and he forced a welcoming smile as he strode the few paces to the table. "Hello, Buzz! Glad you're back. Say, you're looking good," he lied glibly. "Helen's been glad—reunion there's nothing she wanted more than to have your help on that old Triple H spread!"

The other's gaze fell. "I guess you are glad to see me. Got things fixed to suit yourself, Fleming, so I don't need you?"

Utterly lacking in this reply, Link frowned. "What do you mean, Buzz?" "Course I'm glad to see you! Best part is," he chuckled, "I'm in with enthusiasm from those lack-lustre eyes," Helen doesn't know a thing about it. She's tickled when you ride up! Shall we start now?" he suggested.

Canada And Defence

Dominion Has Made No Commitments

Means, House Of Commons

It Told

Canada has made no commitments whatever with regard to empire defence or any other military action, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons in a statement on Tuesday night.

Woodworth (C.C.P., Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. King said he received from Hon. Vincent Massey, high commissioner in London, the text of the statement made in the British House of Commons by Sir H. H. H. Thomas, secretary for the colonies. Mr. Thomas dealt with the conference of Dominion premiers in London last May and the position of the Dominions in the league.

Defence matters had been discussed when the premiers were in London for King George's jubilee. With respect to that, former Prime Minister Borden had said no reference to the league took place. Mr. King said he could say the same thing. He stated that no reference to the league took place between the governments of Canada and the United Kingdom since the Liberal came into office.

Mr. King, that Canada as a member of the league took responsibility only for its own defence, and that taken by Canada on its own behalf.

Little Helps For This Week

Whatever a man saveth that shall he also reap. Galatians 6:7.

How low and taste its fruitage pure.

How sweet and reap its harvest bright.

How sunshiny on the rock and snow.

And reap a harvest home of light.

The life above is the ripe fruit of the life below. The indicators of the soul which shall issue hereafter in perfection must be trained in us throughout the whole course of this earthly life. The future perfection of the soul is not a translation from one state or disposition of the soul to another, but the carrying out as it were the blossoms and fruitage of the one and same principle of spiritual life which through this career on earth has been growing into a promise of perfection, reaching upward after perfect hours.

Trans-Atlantic Air Service

Semi-Weekly Flights Between Britain And America To Start This Summer

Rogues L. Vidal, United States director of air commerce, told an American Legion meeting semi-weekly trans-Atlantic flights between Great Britain and North America will start this summer on regular schedule.

Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways will send two planes a week across the Atlantic, Vidal said. Passenger service, however, will not be inaugurated for some time.

The planes will use the Newfoundland and Ireland route in summer and the Azores and Bermuda route in winter.

French planes eventually to make the Atlantic flight in a single jump, Vidal said, while German aeroplanes will use catapult ships in the vicinity of the Azores.

Home Of The Future

University Professor Sees It As Vacuum Bottle Type

A house built on the vacuum bottle principle may be the forerunner, a Northeastern University professor said, of the air conditioned home of the future.

Its walls are 16 inches thick, its windows never open and its heating system functions without registers or radiators.

Frederick Reiman, assistant professor of mechanical engineering at Boston University, has had it under observation for a year. During that time, he said, because of the automatic air conditioning system built into the dwelling, stable temperature and humidity have remained in practically constant proportions outside conditions.

In the heyday of the Volga river in Russia, 25,000 barges piled the river.

Gold was found in a meteorite which fell in New Mexico several years ago.

Pensions Court Hears Appeals

Many Cases Awaited Consideration At End Of 1935

A total of 789 appeals awaited consideration by the pensions appeal court at the end of 1935, according to information tabled in the House of Commons by Hon. C. C. Power, minister of pensions and national health. Of this number, 27 were appeals of the crown from the pensions commission, 651 were appeals of applicants from the same body, and 111 were in "other categories." The return showed 26 appeals were allowed by the court in 1935, while 1,003 were disallowed.
